Dear Harold—

I'm a little worried about something — You always talk about money & sales to me. I hope you don't think that that is my primary goal. I know that was how my attempt to publish my information was distorted ten years ago, though the papers later retracted it.

I have been an artist (writer) all my life, and I think I've mostly had the highest goals and motivation. I've tried to do right by everyone.

I was never trying to "sell" the autopsy photos, but it seems like all the power in the world came down on me years ago when I first tried to get this story out.

Of course, I want the book to do well, and some of the reason is so Groden and I can recoup some of the vast amount all our efforts cost us.

It is doing well. The 4th printing was 30,000 bks & half were sold before the bk left the plant.

I hope you are feeling well. I know recuperation was tough, but you looked better just after it, than before!

The intensity of the last 2 yrs has devastated me, but things are slowing down, & hopefully I can rest more.

Maybe I can come out there & visit one of these days.

Best wishes,

Harry
